

A SANTA FE CONVICT'S STORY OF HOW HE FEELS HE WAS HANGED.

From the Santa Fe New Mexican.

Theodore Baker, now in the penitentiary awaiting trial for murder in Colfax county, relates a rather interesting experience which Deputy Warden Barrett has written up for an eastern journal. Baker and Mrs. Uruth are charged with having murdered Frank Uruth, the woman's husband. A gang of Colfax citizens lynched Baker, hanging him to a telegraph pole, and left him for dead. In seven hours he was restored to life. He says:

"I went with them, and at the jail door I began to curse them, when one of them put the muzzle of his pistol to my ear and said: 'Keep still or I'll put a bullet through you.' I knew him by his voice, and knew he would do it, and I kept still. A little further on, we came to a telegraph pole. From the crossbar swung a new rope. On the end was a big slip noose. They led me under the rope. I tried to jump, but they pulled me back, as I had promised my folks not to die with my boots on, but before I could do it the noose was thrown over my feet. My senses left me a moment, and then I waked up in what seemed to be another world. As I recollect, they came and pulled me up, and I was hanging by my neck and the knot of the rope had slipped around under my chin. My hands were tied loosely and I jerked them loose and tried to catch the rope above me. Somebody caught me by the feet just then and gave me a jerk. It seemed like a bright flash of lightning passed in front of my eyes. I was followed by a terrible pain up and down across my back and I could feel my legs jerk and draw up. Then there was a blank, and I knew nothing more until 11 o'clock the next day.

"My first recollection was being in the court room and saying: 'What cut me down?' There was a terrific ringing in my ears like the beating of guns. I recognized no one. Moments of unconsciousness followed during several days, and I have very little recollection of the journey here. Even after I had been locked up in this prison for safe keeping for a long time I saw double. Dr. Symington, the prison physician, looked like two persons. I was still troubled with spells of total forgetfulness. Sometimes it seemed I didn't know who I was."

It is asserted that tobacco was in use in China from the earliest times, but we have no certain knowledge that this was the case. It was so, however, the knowledge of the plant and its use must have been carefully guarded by the Chinese, for it was not introduced into any other oriental nation until after its discovery in America. When Columbus first landed on the island of San Domingo, in the West Indies, he found tobacco in use among the natives there, who smoked it when made into small cylindrical rolls, and wrapped in maize-leaf. The Indians on the continent smoked it in a pipe, and among all the tribes from Peru to Upper Canada, the first discoverers found the plant to be in use, and to have been known to them from so early a period that the time of its first discovery was unknown. The smoking of tobacco with the Indians partook largely of the nature of a religious rite. The seeds of the tobacco plant were first brought to Europe by Gonzalo Hernandez de Oviedo, who introduced it into Spain. It was first cultivated as an ornamental plant, till a traveler who had noticed it used among the American Indians, called attention to its narcotic properties. The name is said to have been taken from Tolocaco, a province of Yucatan, though others derive it from Tolago, an island in the Caribbean Sea, and yet others from Tolocaco, in the Gulf of Florida. The practice of smoking the dried leaf of tobacco became general in Spain and its manufacture into snuff followed soon after. It was introduced into Italy in 1560, and about the same time into France. The first to bring the seeds of the plant into the latter country was Jean Nicot, the French ambassador in Portugal, in whose honor tobacco received its botanical name Nicotiana, whence the name nicotine, applied to a poisonous extract from the plant. Tobacco is said to have been first introduced into England by Sir Walter Raleigh. From these beginnings the use of the weed spread over the entire Eastern continent. It did not become known in Asia until the seventeenth century, but was taken up by the Oriental nations with great eagerness, and they are now the greatest smokers in the earth.

The attraction of the sun is an important factor in causing the phenomena of the tides. Though the sun is so very much farther from the earth than the moon, its mass is so enormous that it has considerable tide-producing influence. The force which the sun exerts is the same on both sides of the earth at the same time. The tide-producing force of the sun is about four-fifths that of the moon. At new and full moon the two forces are against each other; the ebb and flow are less than the average, and we have the neap-tides.

WASHINGTON, April 16.—Senator Ingalls has made a canvass of the Senate upon the question of transacting executive business in open session, and finds that there is a majority of six or seven against the proposition. It is believed that the longer the matter is discussed the more support it will receive. Originally, all but very few of the Democrats were opposed to open sessions, for fear that the Republican majority would use the opportunity there offered to attack the Administration for the appointments it has made, but they have discovered that the Republican majority in the Senate is disposed to give out anything that will be to their political advantage, and to conceal everything that will be to the advantage of the majority, and a good many converts are being made on this account.

By a close vote—6 to 5—the Educational Committee of the House to-day directed a favorable report on the Senate bill to provide for the study of the nature of alcoholic drinks and narcotics and of their effects upon the human system in connection with the several divisions of the subjects of physiology and hygiene by the pupils in the public schools in the Territories and the District of Columbia, and in the military and naval cadets, and Indian and colored schools of the Territories. The question of constitutionality was raised by several members of the committee, and met by Mr. O'Donnell, of Michigan, who will report the measure to the House.

Under Constantine the Great, the people were divided into Christians, Jews, and Pagans. The conversion of the Emperor to Christianity won for the new and hitherto much-persecuted faith the patronage of the government. The name Catholic meaning universal, was early adopted by the Christian church. The name Roman was prefixed later, when the supremacy of the Roman church came to be one of the most important doctrines of the church. There is no doubt that the Roman Catholic church can trace its apostolic faith, and its mission back to the apostles themselves.
